Define Problem Statements (Customer Problem Statement Template):

These statements capture ComicCraft's customers: what they are trying to achieve, what stands in their way, why, and how that makes them feel. ComicCraft is a FastAPI web app that uses Gemini Flash (panel outline), Gemini Pro (narration and dialogue) and Stable Diffusion (illustrations) to turn a story prompt into an illustrated comic that can be downloaded as a PDF.

| PS-1                   | A hobbyist storyteller with no drawing skills.              | Turn my story idea into a complete, illustrated comic.                                     | I can't draw, and hiring an illustrator is costly and slow.                         | Making a comic requires both story-writing and illustration skills.        | Frustrated and creatively stuck.              |
| PS-2                   | A teacher or content creator making comics for an audience. | Create a comic with a specific mood (e.g., funny) and art style (e.g., comic book, anime). | Generic templates and one-size-fits-all tools don't let me change the tone or look. | They offer little control over the character, setting, tone and art style. | Restricted and dissatisfied with the results. |

| PS-3 | A user who has previewed their finished comic. | Save, print or share the comic as a professional-looking PDF.   | Panels, images and text are scattered, and laying them out by hand is tedious.      | There is no single workflow that takes a story from idea to a finished, exported comic. | Overwhelmed, and hopeful about a one-click export.    |
| PS-4 | A casual user who wants quick, unique results. | Get a coherent 5-panel story where the text and pictures match. | Separate tools for writing and image creation give mismatched, inconsistent panels. | Story text and image prompts are created independently, with no link between them.      | Disappointed, and unsure the story matches my vision. |
